

Lorna Thomas

Former Deputy Chief of Currency

Bank of Canada

Lorna's career at the Bank of Canada spans 35 years, fulfilling management assignments with progressive complexity. Those roles pertained to the implementation of monetary policy, management of federal government debt, organizational governance and, most recently, the leadership of bank note renewal initiative, until retiring in 2012 from the position of Deputy Chief of the currency department.

Since her retirement, Lorna worked as a consultant in 2014-2015 providing strategic and risk-management advice.
